*Important: Land-altering activity, including but not limited to tree/vegetation removal and ground disturbance (e.g., digging, grading, surface scraping, etc.), should not begin until we have completed our review of the project and you have received our approval. Please submit your application at least 4-6 months in advance of any land-altering activity.

*If you are applying for moorage: Please see Best Management Practices for Marine Docks and Best Management Practices for Fresh Water Docks for details on moorage requirements.

Based on the results of our preliminary assessment, further archaeological study may be required. It is generally expected that any ground-disturbing work within the shíshálh swiya will require an archaeological Preliminary Field Reconnaissance (PFR) and/or an Archaeological Impact Assessment (AIA). These studies provide necessary information to understand potential impacts of a project to shíshálh Title and Rights and will be the sole financial responsibility of the proponent. You will be contacted for your consent prior to the commissioning of any study.

The following is designed to ensure we understand the scope of the proposed development so that we may develop an accurate archaeological work-plan and estimate based on the information provided. Providing complete information will ensure the timely completion of paperwork (estimates, services agreement, permit applications) related to your project.

All archaeological materials in B.C., whether known or unknown, are protected from disturbance without a permit under the Heritage Conservation Act (HCA). If an HCA permit is required, the above list of development components will constitute the extent of work authorized under the permit. Should the scope of work change, please resubmit this form to enable our office to seek an amendment to the permit authorizing the new scope of work. Please be advised that an amendment may be subject to both B.C. Archaeology Branch and First Nation review periods. As a result, amendments may cause a significant delay in the project. Permit amendments may take 45 days (up to 6 months) to be issued by the Province.

Due to high volumes, permit issuance by the B.C. Archaeology Branch can be quite lengthy: 3-6 months. Once permit applications have been submitted to the Province, shíshálh Nation has no control over the time of issuance. We will, however, do our utmost to help expedite the process by providing clear and accurate permit applications that include a shíshálh letter of support. The letter of support will waive the required 45-day First Nation review period in areas where territories do not overlap.

I, _____, have read and understand the information provided in Section 4.
